

Dear Members of Congress:

As leaders in technology, education, and media, we collectively represent hundreds of millions of American families and teachers, all of whom should have access to the benefits of technology. The 12 million students at home without broadband and/or devices must get the support they need to access learning this school year. In this moment of crisis, we must close the digital divide and not exacerbate inequities; funding broadband now will help connect all students. As industry leaders we will continue to do our part to connect students and families, Congress must act as well.
